

While these loans will enable the Philippine government to deliver necessary development projects and the ODA lender countries will benefit from such tied-up provisions, the ordinary Filipino workers are deprived of the opportunity to work and partake in the benefits of the loan the Filipino taxpayers will be paying for. Thus, this bill seeks to require foreign bidders or contract awardees coming from donor countries to at least employ or hire Filipino workers to perform manual, non-technical or other analogous labor in carrying-out these development projects. This legislation proposes that the implementing agencies, together with the Department of Labor and Employment, Department of Justice, and Department of Finance, be primarily responsible in monitoring compliance by these foreign bidders or contract awardees with Philippine laws, rules and regulations, especially those in the interest and for the protection of Filipino workers.

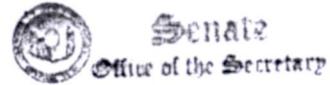

Finally, the necessity to carefully assess the social, environmental and economic impact of these development projects before project approval must be emphasized. This bill thus requires the National Economic and Development Authority to publish the studies on the social, environmental and economic impact of these ODA-funded development projects to promote the transparency of the process and ensure the accountability of the approving authorities and officials.

For the primordial protection and promotion of interests of the ordinary Filipino worker, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
